

I Had a Dream (Loudon Wainwright III)

I had a dream - I don't know what it meant,
But I dreamed Donald Trump was our president.
There on election night, right by his side -
His flunky Chris Christie, along for the ride.
But it gets worse - just wait, there's more -
He made Jeff Sessions Secretary of War,
And, just like he promised, he built him that wall.
He blew up Cuba and he carpet bombed Montreal.

I had a dream - I woke up in a cold sweat -
The Donald was elected in a huge upset.
He made a bad deal with Putin, a secret pact with Assad.
He told the pope where to go - I swear to God.
As for the Supreme Court, he got to choose -
He filled the vacancy up with lyin' Ted Cruz.
His face was bright orange, and his hair was just weird,
But we were made great again, embarrassed and feared.

Yeah, I had a dream, and here's how it went -
I dreamed that the Trumpster was the president.
His little finger on the button, he was doin' his thing -
Our new national anthem was "My Ding-a-ling."
We were bought and sold, like in Monopoly -
He had the most hotels in the land of the free,
Locked up the opposition, and the demonstrators, too -
That would be me, and it might be you.

I had a dream - I'm not sure what it meant
When I dreamed Donald Trump was our president.
And it wasn't even close - he won it in a landslide.
Our new hot First Lady - she was beaming with pride.
If you think that's cool, don't fool yourself -
He made Ben Carson Secretary of Health,
And Sarah Palin Secretary of Stealth,
And if you think that's scary, well just you wait -
He made Newt Gingrich the Secretary of State,
And Rush Limbaugh the Secretary of Hate!

Dreams come true, and there's prophesy,
And sometimes a nightmare is a reality.
